TOP 10 BARREL-AGED GINS

Citadelle Reserve

Cognac Ferrand has been producing a barrel-aged gin under its Citadelle brand since 2007, but founder Alexandre Gabriel changes the recipe up every year to experiment with the emerging technique. The first batch was not sold for general consumption, but the second batch, released in 2008, was very well received. Since then, Citadelle Reserve has been tweak constantly to find the best outcome. In 2009 Gabriel focused on delicateness; in 2010 he discovered the original gin recipe needed tweaking; in 2011 he introduced new botanicals like yuzu; the 2012 release included genepi, a botanical that grows in the Alps; and 2013 used a solera vatting process for the first time.
